TRAMP OF ARMIES SOUNDS IN ROUMANIA

PLOTTING TO SEAT CAROL ON THE THRONE UNCOVERED

Martial Law Declared by the Powers That Be—Fate of the Shaky Government Hangs In the Balance—Former High Government Officer Accused of Being One of the Principals and Is Placed In the State Prison—The Heir Presumptive Is Now Six Years of Age.

The rule of Roumania hangs in the balance.

With the royal family at odds and partisan politicians supporting the claims of father against son for the throne the veil that martial law and official censorship placed between the world and the Roumanian developments became a blank wall at 9 o'clock Tuesday night when telegraph and telephone connections between Bucharest and Belgrade were cut.

The last word to reach Belgrade before the break told of a manifesto issued by General Alexander Averescu's People's party strongly protesting against the arrest of former Minister Manoilescu and denouncing as illegal the government of Premier Bratiano.

The Bratiano government arrested Manoilescu at the frontier and confiscated from him letters from former Crown Prince Carol, whose friends are seeking to place him on the throne he renounced for the love of the auburn-haired Madame Magda Lupescu.

Amidst the whisper of intrigue, the shouting of partisans, and the grim tramp of armed men, the infant King Michael, grandson of the late King Ferdinand and son of the wayward but ambitious Carol, celebrated his sixth birthday anniversary.

Massed troops formed around the government buildings to support Premier Bratiano's demand that the opposition declare its loyalty to the infant monarch. An official proclamation warned of the "severest measures" to suppress the movement for Carol's return.

A "battle royal" is being planned for Thursday by leaders of the opposition parliamentary groups. Summons for members to appear in full strength have been sent to the provinces.

M. Manoilescu, undersecretary of finance in the late Averescu cabinet, is declared by government officials to have carried documents of a proclamatory nature addressed to chiefs of the opposition parties on his return from Paris, when he conferred with the former crown prince and other noted Roumanians.

One of these documents is said to have been a request by Carol for a referendum of the citizens of Roumania as to their wishes regarding his return. Other documents that Manoilescu is alleged to have carried dealt with the question of the dynasty, it is said.

The Peoples' party, newspapers announce, intends to interpellate the government Thursday because of its belief that Manoilescu's arrest is unjustified. Manoilescu is a member of the Peoples' party.

Reports received by this correspondent indicate that Princess Helen, abandoned wife of Carol and King Michael's mother, who had contemplated a trip to Florence has changed her plans in order to avoid the appearance of trying to dodge the present crisis.

The boy king and Queen Marie are at the royal summer palace at Sinala. Queen Marie frequently has expressed the desire that her son, Carol, remain away from Roumania, warning that reopening of the dynasty question only would cause turmoil throughout the country.

Measures he intends to take to maintain the constitutional government were outlined by Premier Bratiano at a meeting with his leading supporters Tuesday. The premier has been absent from his office on account of ill health.

High treason will be charged against M. Manoilescu, according to information received. He will be court martialed, it is said, and it is reported that General Averescu will defend him when before the military court.

SCARLET FEVER.

Nine cases of scarlet fever have been reported to the health officers by physicians. Seven of these cases are outside of the city, six being in Pickaway township and one in Darby township. The schools of Pickaway are closed.

NEWS ABOUT COURT HOUSE

General Happenings Taken From the Records of the Various County Offices

Suit For Divorce.

Josephine B. Stout has filed a civil action for divorce in common pleas court against John R. Stout. The couple was married December 24, 1917. She charges her husband with failure to provide, being drunk and a profligate. She says that he has an interest in some land in Washington township and asks the court for a restraining order to prevent him from disposing of his interest. A restraining order was granted by the court. C. A. Weldon represents the plaintiff.

File Exceptions.

Exceptions were filed in making the final account in the case of the estate of the late Cary Short in probate court Wednesday. The final hearing will be heard November 4. J. W. Wilson of Columbus, represented the Brunson Trust & Savings bank, John P. Phillips, of Chillicothe, the Cary Short estate; Lyle Evans and J. A. Cutright the Valley Savings bank of Chillicothe.

Held Insane.

Taft at 70 and His Ten Grandchildren

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

New Lexington — Clarence Hyde and Charles Black are under arrest and three other Shawnee, Perry county men are being sought by Sheriff Harley McNabb on warrants filed by Mrs. Hazel Lunning, daughter of H. H. Essex, coal operator of New Straitsville, who claims the five men attacked her while she was in the company with John Shea, also of Shawnee. Mrs. Lunning said Shea was taking her and Viola Donnelly, 16, for an auto ride.

Athens — A fact-finding commission was recommended today by Oral Daugherty, president of the Hocking Valley sub district of the United Mine workers to bring an end to the deadlock between the miners' union and Ohio coal operators. "Miners and operators of the district comprising Ohio should get together and name a commission to learn the facts back of the long coal strike in this state and make recommendations on which a wage scale can be based."

Cincinnati — William H. Schubeler and Roscoe C. Brann, internal revenue officers were held today under bond of $500 each charged with accepting bribes and agreeing to adjust with the government the difference of Dr. Peter Boike over his income tax payments.

Toledo — Fifteen members of Lodge avenue Presbyterian church here today were defendants in a $50,000 damage action brought against them by their pastor, Rev. Winfred Altvater, who charged they uttered false statements against him.

Coshocton — Charles V. Truax, state director of education was criticized here last night by Charles I. Knight, of Akron, who said the Ohio corn borer campaign was a political scheme.

Effect of Slander

To be continually subject to the breath of slander will tarnish the purest virtue, as a constant exposure to the atmosphere will obscure the brightness of the finest gold; but in either case the real value of both continues the same, although the currency may be somewhat impeded.—Colton.

Obstinacy Defined

Obstinacy is will asserting itself without being able to justify itself.—It is persistence without a reasonable motive.—It is the tenacity of self-love substituted for that of reason and conscience.—Amiel.

FUNERAL OF MRS. W. I. WOODS

The funeral of the late Mrs. W. I. Woods was held at her home Tuesday afternoon in Williamsport, Rev. W. W. Trout of the Methodist church officiating. Two of her favorite hymns, "Face to Face" and "Lead, Kindly Light" were sung.

The attendance was unusual, as it was one of the largest ever held in the little town. The deceased was a person with a good many womanly qualities. She was a kind mother and a good wife. She was a liberal donor to churches of all creeds and while Mrs. Woods was not a member of any particular church, she attended the church of her parents, the Presbyterian. Her casket was buried beneath flowers, which were tributes of her many friends.

The pallbearers were Benjamin Radcliffe, John W. Myers, Harry Dunlap, and George P. Hunsicker, of Williamsport; B. F. Benford and Judge Curtin, of this city. Interment was made in Forest cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Shoedinger, and Mrs. Bert Morris of Columbus, and Miss Bliss, of Chicago, Illinois, were among the out of town people who attended the funeral.

FARM BUREAU SHOWS RURAL AUTO DRIVERS

Are Better Insurance Risks Than Their Brothers Who Live In Town.

Farmers of the state are taking advantage of the fact that they are better automobile insurance risks than city drivers, according to officials of the Pickaway County Farm bureau. More than 18,000 of them have insured their cars since they established their own mutual company a year and a half ago, according to a report received covering the first eighteen months' operations of the organization.

During the first year of operation a few over 8,000 farmers used the new concern which insures autos of farm owners and operators only. During the first six months of the second year more than 10,000 farmers applied for policies, according to the report received.

The farmer owned group has paid claims to approximately 1400 farmers of the state, and developed assets of $312,000.

The farmers chief risk is not in fire and theft but in liability, property damage and collision, according to the record of claims filed. Only a small percentage of claims arise from fire and theft, officials of the company report.

In this county 276 policies are held by farmers in the mutual.

GRAND CHAPTER ORDER OF THE EASTERN STAR

Convened In Toledo, Over Four Thousand Out of Town Members Present.

With more than 4000 out of town visitors to the Ohio Grand chapter convention of the Order of Eastern Stars registered Tuesday at Toledo and with 3000 Toledo members present, the convention opened Tuesday night.

A special program by the Scottish Rite band of Toledo, at the coliseum preceded the meeting. J. Ernest Teare, Cleveland, most worthy grand patron of the general grand chapter gave the formal address of opening.

Presentation of the flag was made by Mrs. Leore B. Buchanan of Cincinnati, grand marshal; Mrs. Ella C. Vornheder, Cincinnati, worthy grand patron; Mrs. Hazel H. Beach, London past grand matron; Victor H. Salkeld Perry, associate grand patron.

Mrs. Helen Hess, grand representative of the Toledo chapter and Mrs. Otha Schall, deputy grand matron of the sixth district, made addresses.

A welcome to Toledo was given by Mayor Fred J. Merl, with response by George W. Philipott, Lakewood, worthy grand patron.

B. Frank Thomas, most worthy grand master and Otto H. Hohly, commander-in-chief of Toledo consistory and right worshipful deputy grand master of Ohio F. & A. M., Toledo chapter No. 341, also gave addresses of welcome.

Memorial services were conducted by Mrs. Sarah Binder, Wellington, associate grand matron.

PICKAWAY TOWNSHIP P. T. A.

The Pickaway township Parent Teachers' association has planned an unusually good program for Friday evening, October 28 at 7:30 o'clock. The chief feature of the evening will be an address by Professor H. J. Arnold on the subject "What's Right With P. T. A." Professor Arnold has charge of the Parent Teachers' association course offered to teachers at Wittenberg college. He is especially able to give us an inspiring discussion on this subject which should appeal to all who are interested in the welfare of the school and community. Come and let's make this a real rally.

Papa and Mamma Too Busy

Are parents shirkers? Some of them certainly are. Investigation reveals the astounding fact that of all the children in our orphan asylums only 5 per cent are actually orphans. Thirty per cent of them are half orphans, while 65 per cent have both parents living.—Pathfinder.

SAVE OH SAVE CALL SENT OUT BY OCEAN LINER

Principessa Mafaldo Luxurious Boat Goes Down 40 Miles Off Bahia, Brazil.

The Principessa Mafalda, luxurious Italian liner enroute from Genoa to Rio De Janeiro and Buenos Aires, foundered and sank Tuesday night about 40 miles off the port of Bahia, Brazil, presumably with a large loss of life.

The liner carried 1600 passengers, many of them emigrants to Argentina, and while hundreds were rescued by the heroic efforts of the crews of four ships which answered the Mafalda's frantic wireless calls for aid, it is believed many of the steerage passengers went down with the ship. It is known that 720 passengers were saved by the French ship Formosa.

Reports received at Rio De Janeiro by wireless from the Formosa stated she had picked up 720 of the Mafalda's passengers and that she was co-operating with other vessels that rushed to the scene of disaster.

Many of the Mafalda's passengers took to life boats and rafts and some went overboard in life preservers.

Details of the disaster came slowly inasmuch as the rescue ships were intent upon the work of rescue.

More than seven years ago the Principessa Mafalda, while enroute from Buenos Aires to Italy was reported to have struck a mine and sunk with the loss of 700 lives.

The report proved erroneous, when a few days later the ship, in answer to a wireless inquiry, responded that all was well on board and that it had met with no accident.

The vessel was built in 1908, and during the war was used as a troopship by the Italian government. Its dimensions, according to Lloyd's register of the shipping, are 485.2 feet long, and 55.6 feet wide. Its tonnage was given as 9210.

After the war the ship was turned over to the Navigazione Generale Italian company.

SEWER BOND SALE.

The $16,750 Huston street storm water sewer extension bonds were awarded Tuesday by the city auditor, Ella Lindsey, to the First National bank at Circleville, Ohio, for $17,537.25 and accrued interest to date of delivery, they being the highest and best bidders.

Other bids were: The Davies-Betram company of Cincinnati, Ohio, the gross sum of $17,487.

Weill Roth and Irving, of Cincinnati, Ohio, the gross sum of $17,529.

Seasongood and Mayer of Cincinnati, Ohio, the gross sum of $17,454.

The Guardian Trust company of Cleveland, Ohio, the gross sum of $17,432.

A. E. Aub & Co., of Cincinnati, the gross sum of $17,337.

The Third National bank of Circleville, Ohio, the gross sum of $17,361.92.

Ryan, Sutherland & Co., of Toledo, Ohio, the gross sum of $17,325.

W. K. Terry & Co., of Toledo, Ohio, the gross sum of $17,201.

Oldest Maps Found

The oldest two maps of China known to exist were found some years ago at Hsianfu, the capital of Shensi province, says Gas Logie. They were engraved on stone, the larger of the two being believed to be a representation of China as it was in the Eighth century.

BIRTHS

To Mr. and Mrs. Howard Brinkman Monday, October 25, 1927, a son.

THE WEAKEST LINK

Helping Circleville to a higher financial plane can only be accomplished by supporting its business interests and patronizing its stores. As these interests flourish and expand under local patronage the city as a whole will prosper and business will be better for everyone.

The boosters of the town are doing their best to pull its financial interests to the top and improve its credit, but in order to do this the support of the public must hold out. If trade is diverted from the home town, this support weakens and all their efforts are likely to be of little or no avail.

What a fine thing it would be if every resident of Circleville would contribute just one good, strong link to this chain of public support and not permit it to be broken by going out of town to make purchases that can be made just as well, or better, in Circleville.

The Uneven Hemline and Unique Bodice Make This Gown Unusually Distinctive

JOAN CRAWFORD

Original in line and treatment is this sophisticated evening gown of black tulle trimmed with silver beads. The bodice falls in several points in front and higher in the back in striking contrast to the prevailing "up in front and down in back" movement originated by the designer.

The gown is fitted with a deep décolleté at the front and under each arm. The full skirt falls slim and is worn by Miss Joan Crawford in "Goldwyn-Mayer play—'Fever,' her latest film.

Old Lovers United

A romance of more than half a century recently ended happily at Maldenhead, England. William Curtis, the groom, and Miss Kitley, the bride, were boy and girl lovers when both lived in a village near Salisbury. Their ways parted, and for 52 years they did not see each other. Curtis became engineer at Broadmoor asylum, married and became a widower. Miss Kitley remained faithful to the memory of her girlhood sweetheart. When nearly seventy years old they met again, at Bridport, and the old feeling of affection revived. The recent ceremony was the happy sequel. The event was celebrated by many in Maldenhead who had learned of the lengthy romance.

Fawn "Sponged" Meal

One of the high-bred cows belonging to Benedict Gleogler, a Pocono (Pa.) farmer, lost steadily on her production of milk. A son of the farmer solved the mystery when he went to the pasture. A fawn was taking a meal while the cow munched grass contentedly. When its appetite had been satisfied the young deer left.

JOHN D'S GRANDSON

Is Scholarship's Champion--Says There Are Too Much Athletics In College.

John Rockefeller Prentice, the namesake grandson of John D. Rockefeller, one of the world's richest men, who is paying his own way through Yale by working as a night cashier in the New Haven General Hospital, is just as much a conservative as his famous grandfather and is unquestionably preparing to take his proper place in business and society after graduating next year, according to Lin Bonner in an article in this week's Liberty.

In discussing conditions at the University, Prentice told the writer that he believed there was too much athletics, too much pursuit of pleasure and too much devotion to outside affiliations to the detriment of scholarships.

Prentice, who has made a brilliant record at Yale and has captured almost every prize carrying money and honor for a student, told Lin Bonner: "I'm

in favor of athletics in proper proportion, but oppose its being made a god. Many men go out for football or track or for the prominence and publicity they get; others go out for 'news,' become newspaper correspondents; and others for other alien purposes. They will tell you they are fitting themselves for post-graduate careers. I tell them that if that is all they have on their minds, they are wasting time at college and should go at once into their chosen fields and obtain real training for their future activities. The school should be the prime thought of every student.

Sports Dress Is Favored by Paris

Smartest Designs Featured for Autumn; New Fabrics Offer Gay Touch.

The advice first given by Paris a season or so ago, to travel in one's sports clothes, has proved both practicable and comfortable; so much so that the jumper frock in featherweight woollens is designated as a traveling costume as often as it is as a sports frock. Certainly, asserts a Paris fashion writer in the New York Times, the young college woman preparing for a journey, and winter at school can make no better choice than this, since these smartly simple frocks fill a multitude of needs in the daily course of college life.

Before beginning a discussion of sports jumper frocks, it is necessary to reiterate once more that not all jumper suits this fall are sports frocks for, in the face of the evidence, Paris has not been at all successful in enforcing her mandate relegating the jumper suit to informal wear, and she has been forced to grant it entrance once more to the company of afternoon gowns. However, when it is made in jersey, kasha or one of Rodier's new kasha-dors woven with metal threads, there can be no question about its original purpose. Even when the skirt is of satin, as it is in many of the new two-piece frocks, the blouse of wool claims it as a sports frock. Jane Regny makes a charming outfit of this sort with the skirt of taupe satin box-plaited across the front, and with the jumper of taupe kasha woven with wide figured stripes in gold threads. A narrow strip of gold leather fastened with a long slender gold buckle like that on a dog's collar, made the belt.

Paris delights in the unexpected, the mildly incongruous, and has therefore been much taken with Beer's daring in trimming jersey sports suits with inserts of velvet. The first one of these to be shown was in beige jersey with orange section inserts of brown velvet curling up from the jumper's edge nearly to the shoulder. A second frock was even more surprising, since the V-necked jersey jumper was in wide cross stripes of black and steel gray and the plain gray velvet sprang up from the belt in spraying petals at either side. The skirt completing this costume was of plisse plaited steel gray jersey and had not taken the plaiting any better than jersey usually takes it, resulting in a peculiar gathering crepe appearance.

To have two blouses of varying weight and color, to be worn with one skirt, isn't a bad idea at all when the journey is long and packing space limited. Jane Regny very wisely chooses her two blouses so that they can either be worn separately as occasions demand or worn together as jumper and wrap. To achieve this successfully, she starts first with a skirt of heavy brown jersey, plaited all about in narrow box plaits.

Sports Skirts Are Box Plaited; Belt Sweaters

Sports clothes are prominently featured by the leading dressmakers of Paris. The new models in the winter collections have decided characteristics.

Skirts usually are box plaited or circular, or both. Fullness has a tendency to centralize in front and the top of hems may be indicated by a narrow stitch bias band of contrasting material. Many circular skirts of flannel are shown with knitted sweaters. Belts of suede or leather are worn, close to the normal waistline, with most sweaters.

Crepe Satin Street Dress

A smart little crepe satin street dress for a young girl has an all-around bolero and a skirt with three tiers that flare on the right side.

REVISED CODE

No such delay as occurred in the Sacco-Vanzetti case can ever again occur in the courts of Massachusetts, is the opinion of Massachusetts attorneys, according to Wilder Goodwin, prominent New York lawyer, in an article in this week's Liberty. An amendment to the Massachusetts statute concerning criminal appeals in capital cases was passed in 1925, explains the author. It gives capital cases precedence in the Supreme Court.

The amendment eliminates the filing of a cumberson bill of exceptions. This bill embodied a complete review, in narrative form, of the evidence and material in a trial. In the Sacco-Vanzetti case, thousands of pages of comprehensive testimony had to be prepared. The defense attorney worked day and night, for seven months, on the preparation of the bill; the court granting an extension of time. Further delay was caused by the fact that both court and district attorney had to "allow" the bill, after studying it, and agreeing that the presented bill of exceptions contained all the necessary evidence and material. These motions are no longer necessary since the amendment was passed.

TREASURE BORNE BY THE SEA

There is always a certain mystery and fascination about strange objects on the surface of the sea. Thus when Gay Delane, summering on a tiny island off the coast of Maine and exploring a cove beneath her cottage, saw what appeared to be a chest wrapped in rugs or canvas bearing toward her on the tide, she felt a thrill of expectation. It might be treasure trove, pirates' prize! After many surges backward and forward the object finally came within her reach and she was enabled to drag it onto the beach. The nature of the find was not evident at once, but whatever it was, it formed an event in the hard work and humdrum life of the girl, and started a set of circumstances that was to bring crime to the locality and eventually result in much adventure and romance. Read all about it in "IDLE ISLAND," our new serial, which will start in The Herald November 1st.

Heart

By AD SCHUSTER

WHEN Adam Laird discovered he had been cut to the heart by the perfidy of Minerva Jones he decided to become a confirmed bachelor. Adam was wealthy enough to play the part and romantic enough to embellish the role with those touches and graces which fiction gives it.At forty Adam Laird was known as a woman hater. He was known also as a handsome man who owned a large home in which he lived a life of ease.
The few men who had been invited to join him at cards or discussion reported his library was as comfortable and handy a place as a man could wish. In Tannerville there were many who, in the stress of domestic affairs, yearned more than once for a retreat like that of Adam Laird. It was assumed by these men that Adam was riotously happy.Adam tried to take comfort in his sadness. He was fond of imagining that Minerva Jones would look upon the wreck she had made of his life and shed bitter tears. "I am accountable to no one but myself," he mused,
"and therefore I am happier than any man in Tannerville." But for all of that, the hours were slow in passing.The bachelor took to chess as a companion to his loneliness. With a rule book, he studied the moves and on a board before him conducted games with an imaginary opponent.
Then he subscribed to a chess magazine and in time considered he was an expert. There was no one in Tannerville with whom he could play.An idea came to Adam after reading a chess problem in his magazine. It was signed C. Y. Riddle, Minnowville, a name he had seen attached to many another communication on the subject.
Adam wrote Riddle proposing that they carry on a game by mail. He even offered a silver cup for the winner.Before the month was out the game was on, and it was a game to thrill the soul of the ardent chess fan. Abner had a whole day in which to decide his move. Then he mailed a postal card to Riddle carrying the decision and waited until he received the card which revealed the manner in which his play was countered.Riddle was a good chess player.
Adam consulted his books, studied hours over his board, and played as if his life and reputation were at stake. It took six months to play that game and Riddle won. Exhausted Adam went for a vacation in the woods. He would return and have his revenge.Adam sat before his chess board undecided as to the opening gambit.
"At last I have put Minerva and women out of my mind. I will live for a higher purpose. I will give my life to chess!" Before he went to bed he mailed his card to Riddle and the second great game was on its way.The bachelor was enough of the chess player to realize that C. Y. Riddle was a player after his own heart.
As the game progressed there came the desire to meet the man, to play with him over a common table. So Adam wrote, including the words:
"You are a player after my own heart." And Riddle accepted on condition the other would make the trip."I find," wrote Riddle, "I will not be able to leave Minnowville. Let me know when you expect to come."The adventure started off in a disconcerting way. When Adam rang the bell at the Minnowville address he was welcomed by a calm-eyed woman of thirty."I am looking for C. Y. Riddle, a gentleman with whom I was playing a game of chess."The woman smiled. "I am Carolyn Y. Riddle," she answered, "and you are Adam Laird? You cannot imagine how I have enjoyed our game!"Adam gasped. His chess route to happiness was blocked by a woman!
He should have guessed it, he told himself. They were everywhere. But this woman who smiled with so much of understanding could play the game as well, if not better than he. She was—and this was his consolation—an extraordinary woman."I thought you were a man," he apologized, "and yet I might have known by the—er—delicate way you handled your rooks." He blushed and told himself he was talking like an idiot."Suppose," said C. Y. Riddle, "we start on that game?"Adam, at the chess table, looked at the waving brown hair brought almost into his face as the girl leaned over the board. He could not fix his mind on knights, bishops, pawns and the rest. It seemed to him somehow that this was what he had been wanting for a long time, a girl to sit opposite him at a table, at chess, breakfast—any kind of table.Every evening for a week he called to continue the game and all the while he knew he was beaten."It is all up," he said when she checkmated him. He looked at her and thought he read his future in the gaze she returned."I think"—and he heard himself speaking as if from a distance—"I think that if you were to marry me and come to Tannerville we could have some fine games of chess."The girl laughed. "All right, partner," she said, "you know you said
I was a player after your own heart."MAXIM HAD PLANE IN YEAR OF 1894Hiram S. Maxim is believed to be the first to prove that a body heavier than air could be lifted by its own motive power. His crude and complicated machine accomplished the feat in July, 1894. It was supplied with screw propellers weighing 135 pounds each and measuring 17 feet 10 inches over the tips of the blades. These were attached to a shaft that ran at an average speed of 375 revolutions a minute, operated by a pair of compound engines, supplied with steam from a combined multibular boiler, feed-water heater and gas-heating burner, weighing 1,000 pounds, provided with 7,650 jets, the boiler having a heating surface of about 800 feet. The entire machine, together with its full equipment of fuel, water and men, weighed less than 8,000 pounds. A writer in Cassier's Magazine, in 1895, observed:"As a mechanical structure this machine is unquestionably a masterpiece of work and it has been appropriately described by an eminent engineer as 'not an invention, but a museum of inventions.'"—Kansas City

Error Regarding Indigestion

Now, it is a popular error to suppose that indigestion is merely an affection of the stomach. There is not a single organ, a single tissue, or a nerve which is not affected to some considerable degree.

White Way Experts Blame Gloomy Buildings
For Streets That Become "Tunnels" At Night

In each picture note how the light colored buildings stand out while the darker ones are practically invisible.

Many of America's finest business streets become mere tunnels of light at night, due to lack of co-ordination between structural and illuminating plans, it was found in experiments conducted by the General Electric Company and the National Terra Cotta Society. The experiments were under the supervision of W. D. Arcey Ryan, director of the General Electric illuminating engineering laboratory.

Even where the light is properly distributed its effect is lost if the buildings are of materials with insufficient reflectivity. Experiments in the laboratory at Schenectady showed that the dimly lit streets are made more visible by the use of materials such as terra cotta, which reflect light better than the dark materials of the buildings.

streets where the sphere of vision extends to normal heights, it was pointed out.

Savings to taxpayers result from light colored buildings. General Electric engineers showed. On America's five old streets, classed as "intensive White Ways," annual lighting costs range all the way from about $10,000 a mile to more than five times that amount. Character of the adjacent buildings is an important factor in the expense.

TO KEEP POISE AND CHARM—DON'T LIVE WITH THINGS YOU DO NOT LIKE

Young Matron Thinks Up New Way to Evade Lines of Carking Care

By Roger A. Lea

"I'm all through," said Margaret Arnold, pretty and youthful and the mother of three boys, "putting up with things I detest. Do you know, Janet, that's what wears women all out and makes hate-wrinkles in their faces? It isn't housekeeping, or normal husbands who skylark around occasionally, or having children, or doing without face treatments. It's living with things we abominate, but keep on enduring because we think we have to."

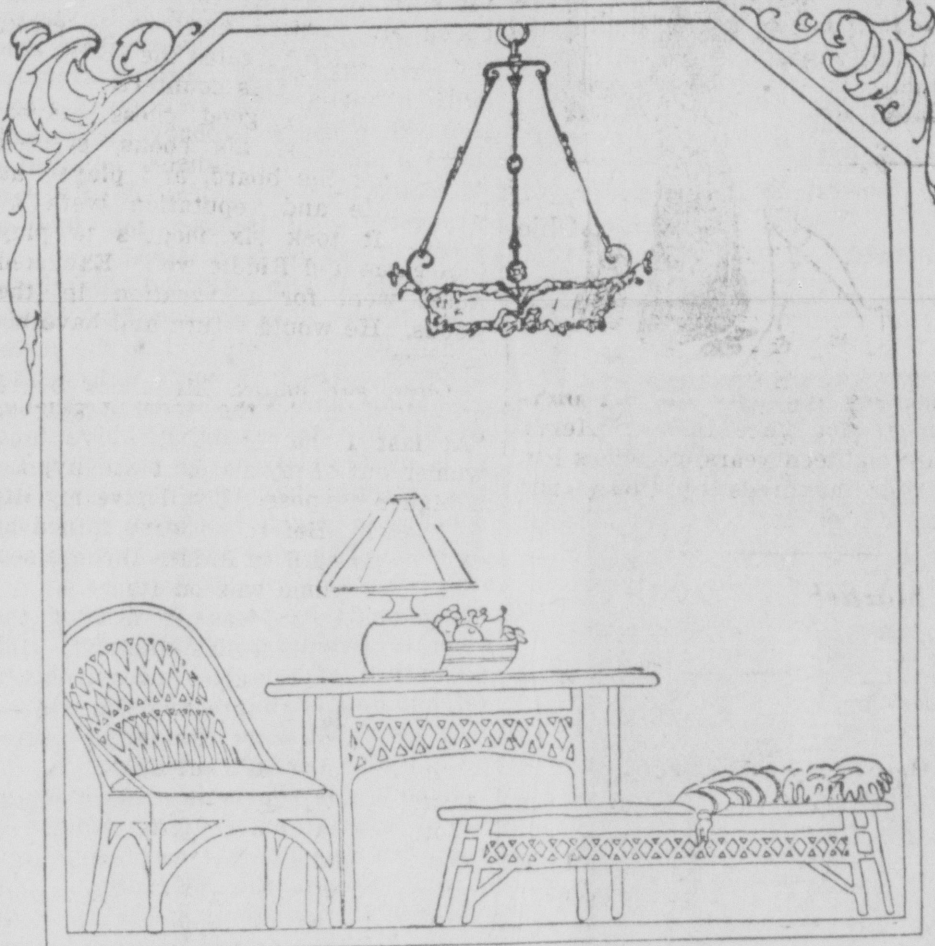

"What are you going to have changed now?" Janet asked. Janet had been her maid of honor, and was still unmarried; and she had lots of fun attending Margaret's adventures in housekeeping. "Seems to me you've run the gamut of interior decoration; the way you study periods, and put in days on end running down some little bit of a thing to gain a certain effect you start out to achieve. I tease you a lot, but I do think you're a genius, no less. Honestly, I can't see what you could improve."

Final Note in Harmonious Ensemble

"Look around you. Can't you see the one thing in this whole house that is incongruous? That doesn't 'match'? It's the lighting fixtures. When they build these apartments to rent to people in moderate circumstances (it's been just as bad in the other places we lived) they either put in lighting equipment that is a relic of early gaslighting days; or else they choose some distinct period-type stuff that is sure to quarrel with the furniture the tenants own. Mercy, we can't all hit on the same period, you know! Or maybe they give us a set of garish, glittering stuff that looks like a cheap dance hall by night and Greenwich Village by day. Now, my great idea is this: people ought to have individual chandeliers and wall brackets they select themselves, just as they have their own lamps, choose their own wall finishing, and buy curtains they like for their windows."

"Are you going to buy new ones, Marge?"

"I am," stated Mrs. Arnold, her eyes shining with the joy of the discoverer. "I've already found out all about it. Just as an experiment, I bought a new light to hang in the sun parlor. It is pretty and graceful, isn't it? Well, I watched the man put it up. Why, it was just about like taking down curtains and putting up clean ones! Not a bit of fuss; and only about five minutes' work. It was the biggest surprise of my life. I had visions of tearing out the old one by the roots and wrecking the place. He explained to me about a little thing he uses to connect the wires that hang out of the wall when he takes the old fixture down—without using solder or anything. It's a patent thing he slides the wire into, at each end; then he tightens up a couple of screws in this 'connector,'—as he calls it—and wraps some electrician's tape around it, just as quick as you please."

Changing Lights a Simple Trick
"Is that what you mean?" light so easy to change?"

"That's all," said the other woman, "and it's a real saving with the electric bill."

flakes, he called 'em—oh, no. I believe he said fluxes—and running up and down the ladder while he got these things all together. This simple little thing makes hooking electric wires together just fun. You can't even lose the screws, because they don't come out. I could almost do it myself. Look, I made him give me one to show Harry. He's always changing connections in his radio; and I thought he'd like to know about these solderless connectors. He makes an awful fuss soldering things.

"Anyway, this settles the old fixtures. Out they go! And down town I go—to buy lighting equipment that will harmonize. Then we will take this junk down; pack it away; and let them have it back when we move out, all bright and glittery and new, perfectly unspotted of the world—for their next tenants!"

"Well," said Janet, "I'll have to agree the lighting fixtures might be more in keeping with furnishings. But I still say—you're a genius."

"Not at all. Simply observing!"

Proper Food for Parrot

Parrots in the wild state live on seed and fruit, and should, while in captivity, be fed as nearly as possible the same kind of food. They should be fed sunflower seed, hemp seed, boiled yellow corn, stale bread, soaked in water, an occasional piece of apple or banana, roasted peanuts, dry crackers. Plenty of water and gravel should be kept in the cage. The parrot's cage should be cleaned every day.

Unwelcome Immigrant

The boll weevil is something this country has acquired from Mexico. It crossed the Rio Grande river in 1892. Since then it has been traveling from 40 to 160 miles each year, and now covers the greater part of the cotton states.

Essay on Geese

The following composition on geese was written, according to Capper's Weekly, by a schoolboy in St. Louis: "Geese is a heavy-set bird with a head on one side and a tail on the other. His feet is set so far back on his running gear that they nearly miss his body. Some geese is ganders and has a curl in his tail. Ganders don't lay or set. They just eat, loaf and go swimming. If I had to be a geese, I would rather be a gander. Geese do not give milk, but give eggs, but for me, give me liberty or give me death."

Fashion a Small Matter

Fashion is among the last influences under which a human being who respects himself or who comprehends the great end of life would desire to be placed.—William Ellery Channing.

Origin of "Gob"

A slide-light was shown upon the word "gob" by the Scotsman of August 4, 1890, which said that when a meeting of the coast guard takes place the men indulge in protracted yarns, a draw of the pipe, and a friendly chaw. Such a session is invariably productive of a considerable amount of good-natured banter, as well as free expectation all around, wherefrom our friends came to be known as "gobles" (from "gob," the mouth). In the process of time gob and gobbler came to be applied to the ships manned by the gobs.

Sea Shells

The bureau of standards says that shells are made up of alternate layers of a horny material and calcium carbonate containing a little organic matter.

AMUSEMENTS

Strange shadows of terror, vivid portrayals of the struggle that rent asunder a great nation, and characters from a world unknown to the rest of the nations of the earth—these are the background for Lon Chaney's strangest role in his new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, "Mockery."

The new picture, now playing at the Met theater, a grim drama of the Russian revolution, shows Chaney in one of the most startling characterizations in his checkered history. He is a Russian peasant, stranger, half-animal of the lower classes, product of generations of serfdom, suddenly thrust into the red struggle. His terrors, his sudden seizure of sinister power and the strange trick of fate that binds his with that of an aristocratic woman in an amazing plot of love, peril and intrigue, make his role one of the most complicated characterizations that has ever fallen to his lot.

He plays it with a remarkable artistry, bringing out the many sides of the odd character with the unerring skill of the finished actor, in delicate little touches that paint a complete mental picture of the weird person he portrays.

Benjamin Christensen, the famous Danish director of "The Devil's Circus" who directed this picture, did so with a clever mingling of the methods of both Europe and America. His subtle use of strange and grotesque shadows to accent direct American methods of screen narration make the picture doubly interesting.

Barbara Bedford is seen as the heroine, Tatiana, an aristocrat fleeing from the onrush of the Reds, who comes under the power and protection of the strange central character in the story, and Ricardo Cortez furnishes the romantic figure as her lover, a young Russian officer. Mack Swain, Charles Puffy, Kai Schmidt, Emily Fitzroy and others of note are seen in splendidly balanced roles. The settings are lavish, giving a vivid picture of Russia during the revolt.

Announcement was made today by C. E. Brandt, manager of the local J. C. Penney Co. store of the purchase of the 20 stores operated by the Golden Rule Mercantile Co., by the J. C. Penney Co. The latter organization owns and operates 885 stores throughout the country. The deal involving the consolidation of the Golden Rule Mercantile company with the J. C. Penney Co., is the largest of its kind ever put through in this section and involves a consideration of more than $2,000,000 according to a statement made by E. M. Towner, vice-president of the Golden Rule Mercantile Co. and one of the largest stockholders in that organization. Negotiations were completed in New York City on October 4, with the J. C. Penney Company represented by Earl C. Sams, president.

The stores involved will start operation under the J. C. Penney Company name on Jan. 1, 1928, following the annual inventory of both companies and the J. C. Penney Company will take over the furniture, fixtures, leases and stock of the Golden Rule Mercantile Company at this time.

Get out your old red flannels, Jack Frost is back in town; The bees have left the clover, And the leaves are turning brown.

It's a warning to get ready For a visitor who's coming soon— No one but old hard Winter; We must hurry and make him room.

It's hard to give up our summer sports, As the season for them must go; But many will welcome the winter And, for a change, the frost and snow.

And when it gets too cold and bleak In the winter time, There's a cheerful thought for us to keep: Spring isn't far behind.

HEAD CHOPPING LESS ARTISTIC

Methods of Execution in China Go Into Period of Decline.

Peking.—Living in China is a precarious job but it's no trouble whatever to be killed.

Chinese execution methods, like Chinese business, are said by many experts to have gone into a period of decline. But this generalization applies only to technique, and if one is willing to put up with a bit of bawling he can take his choice in China of a wide variety of more or less happy endings.

Decapitation is of course the best known method of execution here. In days of old, the executioner with his broad heavy sword was a man of real skill and he lopped off heads with the facility of an experienced artist who took pride in his work. In these decadent times the heads fall less neatly though even faster. There seems to be no real professional headsman class, though the growth of labor unions may build one up.

Picks Nearest Soldier.

Nowadays when a few unfortunates are to be beheaded, the military commander in charge picks out the nearest husky soldier and orders him to fly at it. This the soldier does with more enthusiasm than skill, usually having to take several hacks at each neck and sometimes resorting at last to sawing. Chinese crowds enjoy this sort of thing but foreign spectators have been known to suffer from unexpected mal de mer.

Intricate Chinese beliefs make it a matter of deep disgrace and even graver consequence for a dead body to be mutilated; the family of the deceased is thereby dishonored, and the departed is supposed to lose his chances in the after life. Therefore beheading is not popular under any circumstances, but in olden days if the victim was a man of means he used to "lip" the executioner to recover the severed head at once and sew it back on the body, with as little loss of blood as possible. This is never done nowadays.

Strangling, the official execution provided in the criminal code, is considered by Chinese the most happy sort of dispatch because it leaves the body unutilized. The emperor used to have his erling officials strangled with a silken cord, and for this reason silken cords probably always will have a somewhat sinister connotation in China. In republican days a less expensive cord is used, but just as great efficiency is attained.

Chang Tso-lin ordered strangulation in the case of the 21 Chinese caught in the recent raid on the soviet embassy. There is some reticence in disclosing details about the exact way in which this execution took place. It is understood that in similar cases the prisoner has been stood against a board in which two holes had been pierced. The cord passes through the two holes and around the neck of the condemned; by means of a stick the rope is twisted and tightened. One advantage of this idea over occidental hanging is that the victim can be half strangled, then allowed to revive.

War Lords Want Speed.

Shooting is the most modern method of execution in China today, as electrocution has not yet come into vogue, despite the possibilities now afforded by the supply of electric power in Peking and other large cities. Usually shooting is a very unceremonious affair, in which a rifle muzzle is placed close against the back of a man's head, with unpleasant consequences to the head in question. Occasionally the man is put in front of a firing squad, but Chinese marksmanship is so uniformly poor that this method cannot be resorted to if there is more than one man to be killed.

Slow slicing, broiling over fires, starving to death in cages, skinning alive, day by day gradual piercing by sharp stakes, and other unappetizing methods of execution have been pushed out of use by the hurrying rush of modern civilization in China. Experts agree that the days of esthetic execution are over. Nowadays the war lords demand speed, and in their careless insistence upon this alone they have gradually driven all artistic element out of what was once to Chinese eyes a high profession.

EUROPEAN DOLLAR?

European bankers, mulling over the affairs of European countries, find conflicting interests in manufacturing, marketing and finance. There are natural and wholly artificial lines of both cleavage and union. New countries, jealous of their prospects, incline to stand on technicalities and demand the last penny in their dealings. Older countries, more experienced, tend rather to work together.

The hope of Europe is clearly in the extent to which various heavy industries can be co-ordinated, even across boundaries. French and German coal and iron are a good example. Notwithstanding national dividing lines, they have strong operations in common, and there are heavy financial holdings internationally.

It is not strange that European bankers turn again and again to the possibility of having a sort of super-currency for the 35 nations of their continent. They would like a Central Reserve Bank of Europe. They cite the dollar of the 48 American states as example of the value of a common currency. But they seem to think that unless there is central authority, governmentally speaking, no such institution can be devised. Prof. Cassel points out that the German states were unable to enjoy a common currency until the Reichsbank arrived.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF MARRIAGE

An announcement of interest in this city is the one printed below which has been received by a number of friends in this city: Mrs. Frederick Edward Sexauer announces the marriage of her daughter, Mildred Harriet to Mr. Maynard Edward Sensenbrenner, Saturday, the eighth of October, One thousand nine hundred and twenty-seven, Los Angeles, California. At home after first of November, 220 West Sixty-fifth street.

Tree Grows Anywhere

Longleaf pine is a particularly valuable tree for woodlands in many parts of the South because of its ability to grow in the poorest and deepest sandy types of land. It will also grow in the driest as well as wettest soils.

HARTMAN THEATER

At the Hartman theater, Columbus one of the year's foremost stars and plays will open a week's engagement next Monday night with matinee Wednesday and Saturday, when William A. Brady presents Patricia Collings in "What Every Woman Knows" by Sir James M. Barrie. No ordinary attraction this, but one that has broken records not only in New York with a run of 34 weeks, but in Boston and in Philadelphia, the latter conservative city contributing $73,000 to the box office in four weeks, a high mark for dramatic attractions.

Obviously the question is: What's the appeal? It is this: Here is a girl you may have seen her in "Tarnish" or "Pollyanna" who was selected by Mr. Brady for the role of delightful Maggie Wylie in this comedy by Sir James. When the play, originally scheduled for a four weeks' run on Broadway, opened it was a triumph. It ran thru summer and fall, and on the closing of its New York run, requests from other cities were so numerous that Mr. Brady arranged a tour of the larger cities.

The Boston and Philadelphia engagements, attest to the fact that the play is the thing for its success outside New York has become a theatrical miracle. Patricia Collings, who stars in the play can be fairly ranked amongst the leading young American stars.

True, her starring vehicle affords wonderful material. Barrie never wrote a more delightful comedy than this simple comedy of domestic life. And that means considerable, for Sir James is the world's highest paid playwright. He wouldn't be, if he hadn't ability to entertain you better than any other writer. In this comedy he has taken a demure Scotch miss, and shows how easy it is to win a husband when you're a real woman. Which means, of course, having charm, and shrewdness, and downright common sense. Rare quality, this last. The girl helps to make her husband a success (and what wife hasn't?) and then sees him fall in love (or thinks he's falling—and what man knows the difference?) with a woman aristocratic and dumb.

Silo Has Great Value for Corn

Poor Cop and Borer Point Wayo Proper Storage of Feed.

This fact the silo provides the best way to cope with the European corn borer and make the most of what may be sown from the corn crop, says the New York state college of agriculture at Cornell university.

Unless it rains fall this will be one of New York's poorest corn years, the college points out. Planting was late because of unfavorable weather; a shortage of good seed was responsible for many a poor stand; corn fields were disked and seeded to buckwheat. A late fall may help some but cannot compensate for the cool summer which has reduced yields in every corn field.

Put Soft Corn in Silo.

Much corn grown for grain will have to be put in the silo if it is to be saved. Soft corn which will not keep in a crib; safe in a silo; and corn stalks, cut up fine and put through the fermentation of silage cannot harbor live corn borers.

Corn properly stored in the silo retains more of its feeding value than by any other method. The college suggests that the farmer allow his corn to stand as long as possible, remembering that each day's growth means hundreds of pounds of feed; allow the ears to reach the glazed stage, if possible; if he must cut corn that is very immature, the bundles should lie on the ground a couple of days to evaporate some of the excess moisture. Extremely green silage is watery and poor in quality.

Reduce Spoilage in Silo.

Reduce the spoilage in the silo by having the walls air-tight; by cutting the pieces small; and by packing firmly to exclude even small air pockets where mold may start. In a year like this a good part of the feeding value is in the leaves of the corn plant, so none of the leaves should be lost.

Native Vegetables Are Most Valuable Plants

In the American vegetable garden eight principal food products had their origin in the Indian crops existing here before the advent of the white man. These include beans, corn, peppers, pumpkins, squash, tomato, potato and sweet potato. Vegetables of Old World origin are far more numerous. The United States Department of Agriculture lists 24 of importance, cucumbers, eggplant, muskmelon, watermelon, okra, asparagus, beets, Brussels sprouts, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, kale and collard, kohlrabi, leek, lettuce, onion, parsley, parsnips, peas, radish, salsify, spinach and turnip. But the value of the crop of the eight native vegetables is considered greater than the 24 of foreign origin. Since the discovery of America the white man has not "tamed" any native plants which the Indians had not already brought from warmer parts of America, but notable improvements have been made in the quality and yield of most of these vegetables.

Profitable Practice of Hogging Down Corn Crop

The practice of hogging down corn has been growing very rapidly in the corn belt states in recent years. It is a good practice because it saves labor and increases the rapidity of hog gains, provided the corn is properly supplemented. A few farmers still make the mistake of turning their spring pigs into corn without supplying a supplementary high protein and the proper amount of mineral matter. But the great majority of farmers who follow the practice of hogging down a portion of their corn are placing self-feeders containing a commercial high protein feed and a mineral mixture in the field to allow the pigs to balance their own ration. It is in this way that the most economical as well as the most rapid gains are obtained.

Agricultural Items

Sweet clover hay, properly cured, is practically equal to alfalfa.

Farmers seldom have trouble getting good prices for high-grade produce.

After haying and harvest is a good time to get at that concrete dairy-stable floor.

Millet hay should not be fed to horses for any length of time lest it injure their kidneys.

Poultry manure is the most valuable fertilizer. It is high in organic nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash.

Nearly all diseases of poultry are taken into the body through the mouth, either with the feed or water.

It doesn't pay to keep a hen more than one year unless she has been an exceptionally good layer the first year.

A penny apparently saved by skimping the milk cow on her grain may mean the expenditure of several dollars later on.

Well-Placed Kick

He gave vent to his rebellious feelings by kicking vigorously at what appeared to be a worn-out shoe sole. There was a shower of $20, $10 and $5 bills. Gardner had kicked a decaying wallet.—Pathfinder Magazine.

PLOTTING TO SEAT CAROL ON THE THRONE UNCOVERED

Martial Law Declared by the Powers That Be—Fate of the Shaky Government Hangs In the Balance—Former High Government Officer Accused of Being One of the Principals and Is Placed In the State Prison—The Heir Presumptive Is Now Six Years of Age.

The rule of Roumania hangs in the balance.

With the royal family at odds and partisan politicians supporting the claims of father against son for the throne the veil that martial law and official censorship placed between the world and the Roumanian developments became a blank wall at 9 o'clock Tuesday night when telegraph and telephone connections between Bucharest and Belgrade were cut.

The last word to reach Belgrade before the break told of a manifesto issued by General Alexander Averescu's People's party strongly protesting against the arrest of former Minister Manolescu and denouncing as illegal the government of Premier Bratiano.

The Bratiano government arrested Manolescu at the frontier and confiscated from him letters from former Crown Prince Carol, whose friends are seeking to place him on the throne he renounced for the love of the auburn-haired Madame Magda Lupescu.

Amidst the whisper of intrigue, the shouting of partisans, and the grim tramp of armed men, the infant King Michael, grandson of the late King Ferdinand and son of the wayward but ambitious Carol, celebrated his sixth birthday anniversary.

Massed troops formed around the government buildings to support Premier Bratiano's demand that the opposition declare its loyalty to the infant monarch. An official proclamation warned of the "severest measures," to suppress the movement for Carol's return.

A "battle royal" is being planned for Thursday by leaders of the opposition parliamentary groups. Summons for members to appear in full strength have been sent to the provinces.

M. Manolescu, undersecretary of finance in the late Averescu cabinet, is declared by government officials to have carried documents of a proclamatory nature addressed to chiefs of the opposition parties on his return from Paris, when he conferred with the former crown prince and other noted Roumanians.

One of these documents is said to have been a request by Carol for a referendum of the citizens of Roumania as to their wishes regarding his return. Other documents that Manolescu is alleged to have carried dealt with the question of the dynasty, it is said.

The Peoples' party, newspapers announce, intends to interpellate the government Thursday because of its belief that Manolescu's arrest is unjustified. Manolescu is a member of the Peoples' party.

Reports received by this correspondent indicate that Princess Helen, abandoned wife of Carol and King Michael's mother, who had contemplated a trip to Florence has changed her plans in order to avoid the appearance of trying to dodge the present crisis.

The boy king and Queen Marie are at the royal summer palace at Sinala. Queen Marie frequently has expressed the desire that her son, Carol, remain away from Roumania, warning that reopening of the dynasty question only would cause turmoil throughout the country.

Measures he intends to take to maintain the constitutional government were outlined by Premier Bratiano at a meeting with his leading supporters Tuesday. The premier has been absent from his office on account of ill health.

High treason will be charged against M. Manolescu, according to information received. He will be court martialed. It is said, and it is reported that General Averescu will defend him when before the military court.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

New Lexington — Clarence Hyde and Charles Black are under arrest and three other Shawnee, Perry county men are being sought by Sheriff Harley McNabb on warrants filed by Mrs. Hazel Lunning, daughter of H. H. Essex, coal operator of New Straitsville, who claims the five men attacked her while she was in the company with John Shea, also of Shawnee. Mrs. Lunning said Shea was taking her and Viola Donnelly, 16, for an auto ride.

Athens — A fact-finding commission was recommended today by Oral Daugherty, president of the Hocking Valley sub district of the United Mine workers to bring an end to the deadlock between the miners' union and Ohio coal operators. "Miners and operators of the district comprising Ohio should get together and name a commission to learn the facts back of the long coal strike in this state and make recommendations on which a wage scale can be based."

Cincinnati — William H. Schubeler and Roscoe C. Brann, internal revenue officers were held today under bond of $500 each charged with accepting bribes and agreeing to adjust with the government the difference of Dr. Peter Boike over his income tax payments.

Toledo — Fifteen members of Lodge avenue Presbyterian church here today were defendants in a $50,000 damage action brought against them by their pastor, Rev. Winfred Altwater, who charged they uttered false statements against him.

Coshocton — Charles V. Truax, state director of education was criticized here last night by Charles I. Knight, of Akron, who said the Ohio corn borer campaign was a political scheme.

Effect of Slander

To be continually subject to the breath of slander will tarnish the purest virtue, as a constant exposure to the atmosphere will obscure the brightness of the finest gold; but in either case the real value of both continues the same, although the currency may be somewhat impeded.—Colton.

Obstinacy Defined

Obstinacy is will asserting itself without being able to justify itself.—It is persistence without a reasonable motive.—It is the tenacity of self-love substituted for that of reason and conscience.—Amiel.

FUNERAL OF MRS. W. I. WOODS

The funeral of the late Mrs. W. I. Woods was held at her home Tuesday afternoon in Williamsport, Rev. W. W. Trout of the Methodist church officiating. Two of her favorite hymns, "Face to Face" and "Lead, Kindly Light" were sung.

The attendance was unusual, as it was one of the largest ever held in the little town. The deceased was a person with a good many womanly qualities. She was a kind mother and a good wife. She was a liberal donor to churches of all creeds and while Mrs. Woods was not a member of any particular church, she attended the church of her parents, the Presbyterian. Her casket was buried beneath flowers, which were tributes of her many friends.

The pallbearers were Benjamin Radcliffe, John W. Myers, Harry Dunlap, and George P. Hunsicker, of Williamsport; B. F. Benford and Judge Curtin, of this city. Interment was made in Forest cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Shoedinger, and Mrs. Bert Morris of Columbus, and Miss Bliss, of Chicago, Illinois, were among the out of town people who attended the funeral.

FARM BUREAU SHOWS RURAL AUTO DRIVERS

Are Better Insurance Risks Than Their Brothers Who Live In Town.

Farmers of the state are taking advantage of the fact that they are better automobile insurance risks than city drivers, according to officials of the Pickaway County Farm bureau. More than 18,000 of them have insured their cars since they established their own mutual company a year and a half ago, according to a report received covering the first eighteen months' operations of the organization.

During the first year of operation a few over 8,000 farmers used the new concern which insures autos of farm owners and operators only. During the first six months of the second year more than 10,000 farmers applied for policies, according to the report received.

The farmer owned group has paid claims to approximately 1400 farmers of the state, and developed assets of $312,000.

The farmers chief risk is not in fire and theft but in liability, property damage and collision, according to the record of claims filed. Only a small percentage of claims arise from fire and theft, officials of the company report.

In this county 276 policies are held by farmers in the mutual.

GRAND CHAPTER ORDER OF THE EASTERN STAR

Convened In Toledo, Over Four Thousand Out of Town Members Present.

With more than 4000 out of town visitors to the Ohio Grand chapter convention of the Order of Eastern Stars registered Tuesday at Toledo and with 3000 Toledo members present, the convention opened Tuesday night.

A special program by the Scottish Rite band of Toledo, at the coliseum preceded the meeting. J. Ernest Teare, Cleveland, most worthy grand patron of the general grand chapter gave the formal address of opening.

Presentation of the flag was made by Mrs. Leore B. Buchanan of Cincinnati, grand marshal; Mrs. Ella C. Vornheder, Cincinnati, worthy grand patron; Mrs. Hazel H. Beach, London past grand matron; Victor H. Salkeld Perry, associate grand patron.

Mrs. Helen Hess, grand representative of the Toledo chapter and Mrs. Otha Schall, deputy grand matron of the sixth district, made addresses.

A welcome to Toledo was given by Mayor Fred J. Merl, with response by George W. Phillipott, Lakewood, worthy grand patron.

B. Frank Thomas, most worthy grand master and Otto H. Hohly, commander-in-chief of Toledo consistory and right worshipful deputy grand master of Ohio F. & A. M., Toledo chapter No. 341, also gave addresses of welcome.

Memorial services were conducted by Mrs. Sarah Binder, Wellington, associate grand matron.

PICKAWAY TOWNSHIP P. T. A.

The Pickaway township Parent Teachers' association has planned an unusually good program for Friday evening, October 28 at 7:30 o'clock. The chief feature of the evening will be an address by Professor H. J. Arnold on the subject "What's Right With P. T. A." Professor Arnold has charge of the Parent Teachers' association course offered to teachers at Wittenberg college. He is especially able to give us an inspiring discussion on this subject which should appeal to all who are interested in the welfare of the school and community. Come and let's make this a real rally.

SAVE OH SAVE CALL SENT OUT BY OCEAN LINER

Principessa Mafaldo Luxurious Boat Goes Down 40 Miles Off Bahia, Brazil.

The Principessa Mafalda, luxurious Italian liner enroute from Genoa to Rio De Janeiro and Buenos Aires, foundered and sank Tuesday night about 40 miles off the port of Bahia, Brazil, presumably with a large loss of life.

The liner carried 1600 passengers, many of them emigrants to Argentina, and while hundreds were rescued by the heroic efforts of the crews of four ships which answered the Mafalda's frantic wireless calls for aid, it is believed many of the steerage passengers went down with the ship. It is known that 720 passengers were saved by the French ship Formosa.

Reports received at Rio De Janeiro by wireless from the Formosa stated she had picked up 720 of the Mafalda's passengers and that she was co-operating with other vessels that rushed to the scene of disaster.

Many of the Mafalda's passengers took to life boats and rafts and some went overboard in life preservers.

Details of the disaster came slowly inasmuch as the rescue ships were intent upon the work of rescue.

More than seven years ago the Principessa Mafalda, while enroute from Buenos Aires to Italy was reported to have struck a mine and sunk with the loss of 700 lives.

The report proved erroneous, when a few days later the ship, in answer to a wireless inquiry, responded that all was well on board and that it had met with no accident.

The vessel was built in 1908, and during the war was used as a troopship by the Italian government. Its dimensions, according to Lloyd's register of the shipping, are 485.2 feet long, and 55.6 feet wide. Its tonnage was given as 9210.

After the war the ship was turned over to the Navigazione Generale Italian company.

SEWER BOND SALE

THE WEAKEST LINK

Helping Circleville to a higher financial plane can only be accomplished by supporting its business interests and patronizing its stores. As these interests flourish and expand under local patronage the city as a whole will prosper and business will be better for everyone.

The boosters of the town are doing their best to pull its financial interests to the top and improve its credit, but in order to do this the support of the public must hold out. If trade is diverted from the home town, this support weakens and all their efforts are likely to be of little or no avail.

What a fine thing it would be if every resident of Circleville would contribute just one good, strong link to this chain of public support and not permit it to be broken by going out of town to make purchases that can be made just as well, or better, in Circleville.

Old Lovers United

A romance of more than half a century recently ended happily at Maldenhead, England. William Curtis, the groom, and Miss Kitley, the bride, were boy and girl lovers when both lived in a village near Salisbury. Their ways parted, and for 52 years they did not see each other. Curtis became engineer at Broadmoor asylum, married and became a widower. Miss Kitley remained faithful to the memory of her girlhood sweetheart. When nearly seventy years old they met again, at Bridport, and the old feeling of affection revived. The recent ceremony was the happy sequel. The event was celebrated by many in Maldenhead who had learned of the lengthy romance.

JOHN D'S GRANDSON

Is Scholarship's Champion—Says There Are Too Much Athletics In College.

John Rockefeller Prentice, the namesake grandson of John D. Rockefeller, one of the world's richest men, who is paying his own way through Yale by working as a night cashier in the New Haven General Hospital, is just as much a conservative as his famous grandfather and is unquestionably preparing to take his proper place in business and society after graduating next year, according to Lin Bonner in an article in this week's Liberty.

In discussing conditions at the University, Prentice told the writer that he believed there was too much athletics, too much pursuit of pleasure and too much devotion to outside affiliations to the detriment of scholarships.

Prentice, who has made a brilliant record at Yale and has captured almost every prize carrying money and honor for a student, told Lin Bonner: "I'm in favor of athletics in proper proportion, but oppose its being made a god. Many men go out for football or track or for the prominence and publicity they get; others go out for 'news,' become newspaper correspondents; and others for other alien purposes. They will tell you they are fitting themselves for post-graduate careers. I tell them that if that is all they have on their minds, they are wasting time at college and should go at once into their chosen fields and obtain real training for their future activities. The school should be the prime thought of every student.

The hope that Byron Eby, fast halfback, injured in the Michigan game, may be in condition to play against Chicago at the Stadium Saturday, was encouraged by Trainer Mike Chambers, as the Ohio State football squad opened another week of hard practice late Monday.

Eby has a bone separation in his left foot and is forced to navigate the campus on crutches. He is under Chambers' care and the trainer believes the injury may respond rapidly to rest and treatment. The Chillicothe wonder, however, probably will not take part in any of the pre-Chicago practice sessions. Columbus Citizen.

Sports Dress Is Favored by Paris

Smartest Designs Featured for Autumn; New Fabrics Offer Gay Touch.

The advice first given by Paris a season or so ago, to travel in one's sports clothes, has proved both practicable and comfortable; so much so that the jumper frock in featherweight woollens is designated as a traveling costume as often as it is as a sports frock. Certainly, asserts a Paris fashion writer in the New York Times, the young college woman preparing for a journey, and winter at school can make no better choice than this, since these smartly simple frocks fill a multitude of needs in the daily course of college life.

Before beginning a discussion of sports jumper frocks, it is necessary to reiterate once more that not all jumper frocks are sports frocks. In the face of the evidence, Paris has not been at all successful in enforcing her mandate relegating the jumper suit to informal wear, and she has been forced to grant it entrance once more to the company of afternoon gowns. However, when it is made in jersey, kasha or one of Rodier's new kasha-dors woven with metal threads, there can be no question about its original purpose. Even when the skirt is of satin, as it is in many of the new two-piece frocks, the blouse of wool claims it as a sports frock. Jane Regny makes a charming outfit of this sort with the skirt of taupe satin box-plaited across the front, and with the jumper of taupe kasha woven with wide figured stripes in gold threads. A narrow strip of gold leather fastened with a long slender gold buckle like that on a dog's collar, made the belt.

Paris delights in the unexpected, the mildly incongruous, and has therefore been much taken with Beer's daring in trimming jersey sports suits with inserts of velvet. The first one of these to be shown was in beige jersey with orange section inserts of brown velvet curling up from the jumper's edge nearly to the shoulder. A second frock was even more surprising, since the V-necked jersey jumper was in wide cross stripes of black and steel gray and the plain gray velvet sprang up from the belt in spraying petals at either side. The skirt completing this costume was of plisse plaited steel gray jersey and had not taken the plaiting any better than jersey usually takes it, resulting in a peculiar gathering crepe appearance.

To have two blouses of varying weight and color, to be worn with one skirt, isn't a bad idea at all when the journey is long and packing space limited. Jane Regny very wisely chooses her two blouses so that they can either be worn separately as occasions demand or worn together as jumper and wrap. To achieve this successfully, she starts first with a skirt of heavy brown jersey, plaited all about in narrow box plaits.

Sports Skirts Are Box Plaited; Belt Sweaters

Sports clothes are prominently featured by the leading dressmakers of Paris. The new models in the winter collections have decided characteristics.

Skirts usually are box plaited or circular, or both. Fullness has a tendency to centralize in front and the top of hems may be indicated by a narrow stitch bias band of contrasting material. Many circular skirts of dannel are shown with knitted sweaters. Belts of suede or leather are worn, close to the normal waistline, with most sweaters.

Crepe Satin Street Dress

A smart little crepe satin street dress for a young girl has an all-around bolero and a skirt with three tiers that flare on the right side.

REVISED CODE

No such delay as occurred in the Sacco-Vanzetti case can ever again occur in the courts of Massachusetts, is the opinion of Massachusetts attorneys, according to Wilder Goodwin, prominent New York lawyer, in an article in this week's Liberty. An amendment to the Massachusetts statute concerning criminal appeals in capital cases was passed in 1925, explains the author. It gives capital cases precedence in the Supreme Court.

The amendment eliminates the filing of a cumbersome bill of exceptions. This bill embodied a complete review, in narrative form, of the evidence and material in a trial. In the Sacco-Vanzetti case, thousands of pages of comprehensive testimony had to be prepared. The defense attorney worked day and night, for seven months, on the preparation of the bill; the court granting an extension of time. Further delay was caused by the fact that both court and district attorney had to "allow" the bill, after studying it, and agreeing that the presented bill of exceptions contained all the necessary evidence and material. These motions are no longer necessary since the amendment was passed.

TREASURE BORNE

BY THE SEA

There is always a certain mystery and fascination about strange objects on the surface of the sea. Thus when Gay Delane, summering on a tiny island off the coast of Maine and exploring a cove beneath her cottage, saw what appeared to be a chest wrapped in rugs or canvas bearing toward her on the tide, she felt a thrill of expectation. It might be treasure trove, pirates' prize! After many surges backward and forward the object finally came within her reach and she was enabled to drag it onto the beach. The nature of the find was not evident at once, but whatever it was, it formed an event in the hard work and humdrum life of the girl, and started a set of circumstances that was to bring crime to the locality and eventually result in much adventure and romance. Read all about it in "IDLE ISLAND," our new serial, which will start in The Herald November 1st.

A Chicago inventor named Brice, in 1897, was seeking a patent on a process for making gold from a mixture of antimony, iron and sulphur. The patent office would not grant it without proof that the idea had merit, and the then secretary of the treasury was persuaded to direct the mint bureau to try the thing out. There must have been something wrong about the methods of the treasury laboratory, for not a particle of gold or silver was obtained.

Poet's Lofty Position

Among the British men of prominence probably the one who most frequently refused money was Robert Browning, the poet. During the last 25 years of his life editors offered large sums for a short poem from his pen. But Browning said "No." He told his friends when they pointed out the unwisdom of this course that he was determined not to thrust his poems down the throats of people; that if they wanted to read him they could buy his books.

(Copyright)

WHEN Adam Laird discovered he had been cut to the heart by the peridy of Minerva Jones he decided to become a confirmed bachelor. Adam was wealthy enough to play the part and romantic enough to embellish the role with those touches and graces which fiction gives it.

At forty Adam Laird was known as a woman hater. He was known also as a handsome man who owned a large home in which he lived a life of ease. The few men who had been invited to join him at cards or discussion reported his library was as comfortable and handy a place as a man could wish. In Tannerville there were many who, in the stress of domestic affairs, yearned more than once for a retreat like that of Adam Laird. It was assumed by these men that Adam was riotously happy.

Adam tried to take comfort in his sadness. He was fond of imagining that Minerva Jones would look upon the wreck she had made of his life and shed bitter tears. "I am accountable to no one but myself," he mused, "and therefore I am happier than any man in Tannerville." But for all of that, the hours were slow in passing.

The bachelor took to chess as a companion to his loneliness. With a rule book, he studied the moves and on a board before him conducted games with an imaginary opponent. Then he subscribed to a chess magazine and in time considered he was an expert. There was no one in Tannerville with whom he could play.

An idea came to Adam after reading a chess problem in his magazine. It was signed C. Y. Riddle, Minnowville, a name he had seen attached to many another communication on the subject. Adam wrote Riddle proposing that they carry on a game by mail. He even offered a silver cup for the winner.

Before the month was out the game was on, and it was a game to thrill the soul of the ardent chess fan. Adam had a whole day in which to decide his move. Then he mailed a postal card to Riddle carrying the decision and waited until he received the card which revealed the manner in which his play was countered.

Riddle was a good chess player. Adam consulted his books, studied hours over his board, and played as if his life and reputation were at stake. It took six months to play that game and Riddle won. Exhausted Adam went for a vacation in the woods. He would return and have his revenge.

Adam sat before his chess board undecided as to the opening gambit. "At last I have put Minerva and women out of my mind. I will live for a higher purpose. I will give my life to chess!" Before he went to bed he mailed his card to Riddle and the second great game was on its way.

The bachelor was enough of the chess player to realize that C. Y. Riddle was a player after his own heart. As the game progressed there came the desire to meet the man, to play with him over a common table. So Adam wrote, including the words: "You are a player after my own heart." And Riddle accepted on condition the other would make the trip.

"I find," wrote Riddle, "I will not be able to leave Minnowville. Let me know when you expect to come."

The adventure started off in a disconcerting way. When Adam rang the bell at the Minnowville address he was welcomed by a calm-eyed woman of thirty.

"I am looking for C. Y. Riddle, a gentleman with whom I was playing a game of chess."

The woman smiled. "I am Carolyn Y. Riddle," she answered, "and you are Adam Laird? You cannot imagine how I have enjoyed our game!"

Adam gasped. His chess route to happiness was blocked by a woman! He should have guessed it, he told himself. They were everywhere. But this woman who smiled with so much of understanding could play the game as well, if not better than he. She was—and this was his consolation—an extraordinary woman.

"I thought you were a man," he apologized, "and yet I might have known by the—er—delicate way you handled your rooks." He blushed and told himself he was talking like an idiot.

"Suppose," said C. Y. Riddle, "we start on that game."

Adam, at the chess table, looked at the waving brown hair brought almost into his face as the girl leaned over the board. He could not fix his mind on knights, bishops, pawns and the rest. It seemed to him somehow that this was what he had been wanting for a long time, a girl to sit opposite him at a table, at chess, breakfast—any kind of table.

Every evening for a week he called to continue the game and all the while he knew he was beaten.

"It is all up," he said when she checkmated him. He looked at her and thought he read his future in the gaze she returned.

"I think"—and he heard himself speaking as if from a distance—"I think that if you were to marry me and come to Tannerville we could have some fine games of chess."

The girl laughed. "All right, partner," she said, "you know you said I was a player after your own heart."

MAXIM HAD PLANE IN YEAR OF 1894

Hiram S. Maxim is believed to be the first to prove that a body heavier than air could be lifted by its own motive power. His crude and complicated machine accomplished the feat in July, 1894. It was supplied with screw propellers weighing 175 pounds each and measuring 17 feet 10 inches over the tips of the blades. These were attached to a shaft that ran at an average speed of 375 revolutions a minute, operated by a pair of compound engines, supplied with steam from a combined multibular boiler, feed-water heater and gas-heating burner, weighing 1,000 pounds, provided with 7,650 jets, the boiler having a heating surface of about 800 feet. The entire machine, together with its full equipment of fuel, water and men, weighed less than 8,000 pounds. A writer in Cassier's Magazine, in 1895, observed:

"As a mechanical structure this machine is unquestionably a masterpiece of work and it has been appropriately described by an eminent engineer as 'not an invention, but a museum of inventions.'"—Kansas City Star.

White Way Experts Blame Gloomy Buildings
For Streets That Become "Tunnels" At Night

Euclid Avenue, Cleveland. State Street, Chicago.
In each picture note how the light colored buildings stand out while the darker ones are practically invisible.

Many of America's finest business streets become mere tunnels of light at night, due to lack of co-ordination between structural and illuminating plans, it was found in experiments conducted by the General Electric Company and the National Terra Cotta Society. The experiments were under the supervision of W. D'Arcy Ryan, director of the General Electric illuminating engineering laboratory. Even where the light is properly distributed its effect is lost if the buildings are of materials with insufficient visibility. Experiments in the laboratory at Schenectady showed that the primary cause of this condition is obtained in light colored buildings. The experiments showed that the effect of light colored buildings is to reflect the light from the street lights and to absorb the light from the sky. The result is that the buildings appear to be a part of the street and the street becomes a tunnel of light. The experiments also showed that the effect of light colored buildings is to make the street appear to be a tunnel of light. The result is that the buildings appear to be a part of the street and the street becomes a tunnel of light.

TO KEEP POISE AND CHARM—DON'T LIVE WITH THINGS YOU DO NOT LIKE

Young Matron Thinks Up New Way to Evade Lines of Carking Care
By Roger A. Lea

"I'm all through," said Margaret Arnold, pretty and youthful and the mother of three boys, "putting up with things I detest. Do you know, Janet, that's what wears women all out and makes hate-wrinkles in their faces? It isn't housekeeping, or normal husbands who skylark around occasionally, or having children, or doing without face treatments. It's living with things we abominate, but keep on enduring because we think we have to."

Final Note in Harmonious Ensemble

"Look around you. Can't you see the one thing in this whole house that is incongruous? That doesn't match? It's the lighting fixtures. When they build these apartments to rent to people in moderate circumstances (it's been just as bad in the other places we lived) they either put in lighting equipment that is a relic of early gaslighting days; or else they choose some distinct period-type stuff that is sure to quarrel with the furniture the tenants own. Mercy, we can't all hit on the same period, you know! Or maybe they give us a set of garish, glittering stuff that looks like a cheap dance hall by night and Greenwich Village by day. Now, my great idea is this: people ought to have individual chandeliers and wall brackets they select themselves, just as they have their own lamps, choose their own wall finishing, and buy curtains they like for their windows."

"Are you going to buy new ones, Marge?"
"I am," stated Mrs. Arnold, her eyes shining with the joy of the discoverer. "I've already found out

Lights for sun rooms show fanciful decorated standards and the shades are frequently rich in color effects.

all about it. Just as an experiment, I bought a new light to hang in the sun parlor. It is pretty and graceful, isn't it? Well, I watched the man put it up. Why, it was just about like taking down curtains and putting up clean ones! Not a bit of fuss; and only about five minutes' work. It was the biggest surprise of my life. I had visions of tearing out the old one by the roots and wrecking the place. He explained to me about a little thing he uses to connect the wires that hang out of the wall when he takes the old fixture down—without using solder or anything. It's a patent thing he slides the wire into, at each end, then he tightens up a couple of screws in the 'connector,'—as he calls it—and wraps some electrician's tape around it, just as quick as you please."

Changing Lights a Simple Trick
"Is that what a light fixture is?" asked Janet.
"That's all," said Mrs. Arnold. "Otherwise, it's just a piece of wire with a couple of screws in it."

Proper Food for Parrot
Parrots in the wild state live on seed and fruit, and should, while in captivity, be fed as nearly as possible the same kind of food. They should be fed sunflower seed, hemp seed, bolted yellow corn, stale bread, soaked in water, an occasional piece of apple or banana, roasted peanuts, dry crackers. Plenty of water and gravel should be kept in the cage. The parrot's cage should be cleaned every day.

Essay on Geese
The following composition on geese was written, according to Capper's Weekly, by a schoolboy in St. Louis: "Geese is a heavy-set bird with a head on one side and a tail on the other. His feet is set so far back on his running gear that they nearly miss his body. Some geese is ganders and has a curl in his tail. Ganders don't lay or set. They just eat, loaf and go swimming. If I had to be a geese, I would rather be a gander. Geese do not give milk, but give eggs, but for me, give me liberty or give me death."

Fashion a Small Matter
Fashion is among the last influences under which a human being who respects himself or who comprehends the great end of life would desire to be placed.—William Ellery Channing.

AMUSEMENTS

Strange shadows of terror, vivid portrayals of the struggle that rent asunder a great nation, and characters from a world unknown to the rest of the nations of the earth—these are the background for Lon Chaney's strangest role in his new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle, "Mockery."

The new picture, now playing at the Met theater, a grim drama of the Russian revolution, shows Chaney in one of the most startling characterizations in his checkered history. He is a Russian peasant, stranger, half-animal of the lower classes, product of generations of serfdom, suddenly thrust into the red struggle. His terrors, his sudden seizure of sinister power and the strange trick of fate that binds his with that of an aristocratic woman in an amazing plot of love, peril and intrigue, make his role one of the most complicated characterizations that has ever fallen to his lot.

He plays it with a remarkable artistry, bringing out the many sides of the odd character with the unerring skill of the finished actor, in delicate little touches that paint a complete mental picture of the weird person he portrays.

Benjamin Christensen, the famous Danish director of "The Devil's Circus" who directed this picture, did so with a clever mingling of the methods of both Europe and America. His subtle use of strange and grotesque shadows to accent direct American methods of screen narration make the picture doubly interesting.

Barbara Bedford is seen as the heroine, Tatiana, an aristocrat fleeing from the onrush of the Reds, who comes under the power and protection of the strange central character in the story, and Ricardo Cortez furnishes the romantic figure as her lover, a young Russian officer. Mack Swain, Charles Puffy, Kai Schmidt, Emily Fitzroy and others of note are seen in splendidly balanced roles. The settings are lavish, giving a vivid picture of Russia during the revolt.

Announcement was made today by C. E. Brandt, manager of the local J. C. Penney Co. store of the purchase of the 20 stores operated by the Golden Rule Mercantile Co., by the J. C. Penney Co. The latter organization owns and operates 885 stores throughout the country. The deal involving the consolidation of the Golden Rule Mercantile company with the J. C. Penney Co., is the largest of its kind ever put through in this section and involves a consideration of more than $2,000,000 according to a statement made by E. M. Townner, vice-president of the Golden Rule Mercantile Co. and one of the largest stockholders in that organization. Negotiations were completed in New York City on October 4, with the J. C. Penney Company represented by Earl C. Sams, president.

The stores involved will start operation under the J. C. Penney Company name on Jan. 1, 1928, following the annual inventory of both companies and the J. C. Penney Company will take over the furniture, fixtures, leases and stock of the Golden Rule Mercantile Company at this time.

GET OUT YOUR OLD RED FLANNELS

Get out your old red flannels, Jack Frost is back in town; The bees have left the clover, And the leaves are turning brown.
It's too late to go in swimming. Too late for hay-rides, too; It's time for all the little bare feet To put on their winter shoes.
It's a warning to get ready For a visitor who's coming soon— No one but old hard Winter; We must hurry and make him room.
It's hard to give up our summer sports, As the season for them must go; But many will welcome the winter And, for a change, the frost and snow.
And when it gets too cold and bleak In the winter time, There's a cheerful thought for us to keep; Spring isn't far behind.

HEAD CHOPPING LESS ARTISTIC

Methods of Execution in China Go Into Period of Decline.

Peking.—Living in China is a precarious job but it's no trouble whatever to be killed.
Chinese execution methods, like Chinese business, are said by many experts to have gone into a period of decline. But this generalization applies only to technique, and if one is willing to put up with a bit of bawling he can take his choice in China of a wide variety of more or less happy endings.
Decapitation is of course the best known method of execution here. In days of old, the executioner with his broad heavy sword was a man of real skill and he lopped off heads with the facility of an experienced artist who took pride in his work. In these decadent times the heads fall less neatly though even faster. There seems to be no real professional headsman class, though the growth of labor unions may build one up.

Picks Nearest Soldier.
Nowadays when a few unfortunates are to be beheaded, the military commander in charge picks out the nearest husky soldier and orders him to fly at it. This the soldier does with more enthusiasm than skill, usually having to take several hacks at each neck and sometimes resorting at last to sawing. Chinese crowds enjoy this sort of thing but foreign spectators have been known to suffer from unexpected mal de mer.

Intricate Chinese beliefs make it a matter of deep disgrace and even graver consequence for a dead body to be mutilated; the family of the deceased is thereby dishonored, and the departed is supposed to lose his chances in the after life. Therefore beheading is not popular under any circumstances, but in olden days if the victim was a man of means he used to "tip" the executioner to recover the severed head at once and sew it back on the body, with as little loss of blood as possible. This is never done nowadays.

Strangling, the official execution provided in the criminal code, is considered by Chinese the most happy sort of dispatch because it leaves the body unutilized. The emperor used to have his erring officials strangled with a silken cord, and for this reason silken cords probably always will have a somewhat sinister connotation in China. In republican days a less expensive cord is used, but just as great efficiency is attained.

Chang Tso-lin ordered strangulation in the case of the 21 Chinese caught in the recent raid on the soviet embassy. There is some reticence in disclosing details about the exact way in which this execution took place. It is understood that in similar cases the prisoner has been stood against a board in which two holes had been pierced. The cord passes through the two holes and around the neck of the condemned; by means of a stick the rope is twisted and tightened. One advantage of this idea over accidental hanging is that the victim can be half strangled, then allowed to revive.

War Lords Want Speed.
Shooting is the most modern method of execution in China today, as electrocution has not yet come into vogue, despite the possibilities now afforded by the supply of electric power in Peking and other large cities. Usually shooting is a very unceremonious affair, in which a rifle muzzle is placed close against the back of a man's head, with unpleasant consequences to the head in question. Occasionally the man is put in front of a firing squad, but Chinese marksmanship is so uniformly poor that this method cannot be resorted to if there is more than one man to be killed.

Slow slicing, broiling over fires, starving to death in cages, skinning alive, day by day gradual piercing by sharp stakes, and other unappetizing methods of execution have been pushed out of use by the hurrying rush of modern civilization in China. Experts agree that the days of esthetic execution are over. Nowadays the war lords demand speed, and in their careless insistence upon this alone they have gradually driven all artistic element out of what was once to Chinese eyes a high profession.

EUROPEAN DOLLAR?

European bankers, mulling over the affairs of European countries, find conflicting interests in manufacturing, marketing and finance. There are natural and wholly artificial lines of both cleavage and union. New countries, jealous of their prospects, incline to stand on technicalities and demand the last penny in their dealings. Older countries, more experienced, tend rather to work together.

The hope of Europe is clearly in the extent to which various heavy industries can be co-ordinated, even across boundaries. French and German coal and iron are a good example. Notwithstanding national dividing lines, they have strong operations in common, and there are heavy financial holdings internationally.

It is not strange that European bankers turn again and again to the possibility of having a sort of super-currency for the 35 nations of their continent. They would like a Central Reserve Bank of Europe. They cite the dollar of the 48 American states as example of the value of a common currency. But they seem to think that unless there is central authority, governmentally speaking, no such institution can be devised. Prof. Cassel points out that the German states were unable to enjoy a common currency until the Reichsbank arrived.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Tree Grows Anywhere

Longleaf pine is a particularly valuable tree for farm woodlands in many parts of the South because of its ability to grow in the poorest and deepest sandy types of land. It will also grow in the driest as well as wettest soils.

HARTMAN THEATER

At the Hartman theater, Columbus one of the year's foremost stars and plays will open a week's engagement next Monday night with matinee Wednesday and Saturday, when William A. Brady presents Patricia Collings in "What Every Woman Knows" by Sir James M. Barrie. No ordinary attraction this, but one that has broken records not only in New York with a run of 34 weeks, but in Boston and in Philadelphia, the latter conservative city contributing $73,000 to the box office in four weeks, a high mark for dramatic attractions.

Obviously the question is: What's the appeal? It is this: Here is a girl you may have seen her in "Tarnish" or "Pollyanna" who was selected by Mr. Brady for the role of delightful Maggie Wylie in this comedy by Sir James. When the play, originally scheduled for a four weeks' run on Broadway, opened it was a triumph. It ran thru summer and fall, and on the closing of its New York run, requests from other cities were so numerous that Mr. Brady arranged a tour of the larger cities.

The Boston and Philadelphia engagements, attest to the fact that the play is the thing for its success outside New York has become a theatrical miracle. Patricia Collings, who stars in the play can be fairly ranked amongst the leading young American stars.

True, her starring vehicle affords wonderful material. Barrie never wrote a more delightful comedy than this simple comedy of domestic life. And that means considerable, for Sir James is the world's highest paid playwright. He wouldn't be, if he hadn't ability to entertain you better than any other writer. In this comedy he has taken a demure Scotch miss, and shows how easy it is to win a husband when you're a real woman. Which means, of course, having charm, and shrewdness, and downright common sense. Rare quality, this last. The girl helps to make her husband a success (and what wife hasn't?) and then sees him fall in love (or thinks he's falling—and what man knows the difference?) with a woman aristocratic and dumb.

Silo Has Great Value for Corn

Poor Cop and Borer Point Way to Proper Storage of Feed.

This fall the silo provides the best way to store the European corn borer and make the most of what may be sown from the corn crop, says the New York state college of agriculture at Cornell university.

Unless it signs fall this will be one of New York's poorest corn years, the college points out. Planting was late because of unfavorable weather; a shortage of good seed was responsible for many a poor stand; corn fields were disked and seeded to buckwheat. A late fall may help some but cannot compensate for the cool summer which has reduced yields in every corn field.

Put Soft Corn in Silo.
Much corn grown for grain will have to be stored in the silo if it is to be saved. Soft corn which will not keep in a crib; safe in a silo; and corn stalks, cut up fine and put through the fermentation of silage cannot harbor live corn borers.

Corn properly stored in the silo retains more of its feeding value than by any other method. The college suggests that the farmer allow his corn to stand as long as possible, remembering that each day's growth means hundreds of pounds of feed; allow the ears to reach the glazed stage, if possible; if he must cut corn that is very immature, the bundles should lie on the ground a couple of days to evaporate some of the excess moisture. Extremely green silage is watery and poor in quality.

Reduce Spoilage in Silo.
Reduce the spoilage in the silo by having the walls air-tight; by cutting the pieces small; and by packing firmly to exclude even small air pockets where mold may start. In a year like this a good part of the feeding value is in the leaves of the corn plant, so none of the leaves should be lost.

Native Vegetables Are Most Valuable Plants

In the American vegetable garden eight principal food products had their origin in the Indian crops existing here before the advent of the white man. These include beans, corn, peppers, pumpkins, squash, tomato, potato and sweet potato. Vegetables of Old World origin are far more numerous. The United States Department of Agriculture lists 24 of importance, cucumbers, eggplant, muskmelon, watermelon, okra, asparagus, beets, Brussels sprouts, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, kale and collard, kohlrabi, leek, lettuce, onion, parsley, parsnips, peas, radish, salsify, spinach and turnip. But the value of the crop of the eight native vegetables is considered greater than the 24 of foreign origin. Since the discovery of America the white man has not "tamed" an native plants which the Indians had not already brought from warmer parts of America, but notable improvements have been made in the quality and yield of most of these vegetables.

Profitable Practice of Hogging Down Corn Crop

The practice of hogging down corn has been growing very rapidly in the corn belt states in recent years. It is a good practice because it saves labor and increases the rapidity of hog gains, provided the corn is properly supplemented. A few farmers still make the mistake of turning their spring pigs into corn without supplying a supplementary high protein and the proper amount of mineral matter. But the great majority of farmers who follow the practice of hogging down a portion of their corn are placing self-feeders containing a commercial high protein feed and a mineral mixture in the field to allow the pigs to balance their own ration. It is in this way that the most economical as well as the most rapid gains are obtained.

Agricultural Items

Sweet clover hay, properly cured, is practically equal to alfalfa.

Farmers seldom have trouble getting good prices for high-grade produce.

After haying and harvest is a good time to get at that concrete dairy-stable floor.

Millet hay should not be fed to horses for any length of time lest it injure their kidneys.

Poultry manure is the most valuable fertilizer. It is high in organic nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash.

Nearly all diseases of poultry are taken into the body through the mouth, either with the feed or water.

It doesn't pay to keep a hen more than one year unless she has been an exceptionally good layer the first year.

A penny apparently saved by skimping the milk cow on her grain may mean the expenditure of several dollars later on.

Safety From Lightning

The weather bureau says that inside a steel frame building, a reinforced concrete building, or a house with properly installed lightning rods, is a safe place to be during a thunderstorm. Inside a house of any kind, and well away from the walls, is better than being out in the open. Especially dangerous places are close to a wire fence, under a tall tree, and on the top of a hill.

MANY CARS FAIL TO BEAT TRAINS

More Than 1,000 Autos Flivvered in Dash to Crossings.

More than 1,000 automobiles last year crashed into trains, stated M. O. Lorenz, director, bureau of statistics, of Interstate Commerce commission, when he addressed the sixteenth annual safety congress. He said in part:

Deaths at Crossings.

"One of the reasons for concerning ourselves about the number of persons that die each year in various classes of railway accidents is that effort may be concentrated on the types of accidents that occasion especially large numbers of deaths. One may discover from casual reading of the newspapers that there are frequent deaths at grade crossings; but it is only after statistics have been compiled that one can make the general statement that of the 7,000 persons killed in connection with the operation of steam railways in 1926, 2,388, or 33.7 per cent, were nonpassengers at grade crossings and 2,623, or 37.0 per cent, were classified as trespassers on the right of way; so that, taking these two groups together we may say that 70.67 per cent of the railroad fatalities occur because people, other than passengers or employees on duty, are on your right of way at the wrong time.

Many Dangerous Crossings.

"There were, at the close of 1926, 27,847 protected and 206,433 unprotected highway grade crossings with steam railroads. It seems hopeless to make them all fool proof, but doubtless there are thousands of dangerous crossings which would be eliminated or more adequately protected next year if the funds were available. Here is a magnificent enterprise which requires the co-operation of the railroads, the newspapers, the school teacher, the legislator, the inventor, and the rest of the public. When we consider that in 1926 over 1,000 accidents, involving 225 deaths and 1,586 injuries, occurred because automobiles were run into the side of a train, we can appreciate the fact that educating drivers to be careful is one of the most important features of the accident problem."

Escaping Oil Reduces

Efficiency of Brakes

It is important to prevent the escape of lubricant from the differential housing, because it will accumulate on the brakes and reduce their efficiency. While it is difficult to overcome leakage due to an excessive supply, if reasonable precaution is taken in reassembling the axle, the housing may be made leak-proof.

Leakage is usually caused by worn felt washers in the stuffing box which is intended to form the lubricant seal. It is advisable, therefore, to replace the felt washers and other worn parts of the lubricant seal when differential repairs are being made.

Owing to the importance of this feature the slightest amount of wear evident will justify replacement of the parts. The shaft on which the parts bear should be smooth so that it will not wear the seal away and cause the leak to appear again.

The above covers the principal troubles which may arise in the differential; however, there are others which may also cause excessive wear in the gears and bearings. The most serious of these is a sprung axle housing, which has a tendency to crank the bearings and distort the gears, causing rapid wear.

Engine Stops Suddenly

When the engine stops suddenly with no preliminary coughing and spitting, the trouble is with the ignition. A wire may be short circuited, a connection loose; the magneto may fail to trip properly, or the spark plug short circuit as soon as it gets hot. If the engine first coughs and spits and then stops, the trouble is in the fuel line, the valves or the lubrication. If the valves stick, it will show by the lack of compression immediately after stopping.

Muffler Needs Care at Least Once a Year

If the exhaust gases were be allowed to escape directly into the atmosphere the sharp explosion rapidly following each other would prove very annoying. The muffler, by breaking up these gases by fire streams and by allowing them to expand and reducing their pressure until they are nearly of atmospheric pressure, deadens the end of these explosions without imposing any great amount of back pressure, says Automobile Digest.

It so admirably performs its duties that it is often overlooked when the rest of the car receives an overhaul. The internal mechanism of mufflers varies widely; some consisting of simple chambers connected together to form a labyrinth for the gas passage, while the more complicated forms have a number of baffles or walls pierced with small holes. The most effective at present type is generally the more susceptible to derangement and will give trouble sooner than the less efficient.

From time to time all mufflers should be cleaned, as a considerable amount of carbon deposits accumulate in them.

Papers Protect Glass While Painting Auto

A spray gun is often used in painting cars, and if the paint comes in contact with the glass, it means a few hours' additional work to clean it. This trouble can be prevented by the use of old newspapers and adhesive friction tape. The sheets of paper are held against the glass and the tape is used as a binding that fits closely along the edges of the glass, leaving none of it exposed. When the fenders are to be painted in a color differing from that of the body, the same plan may be used to prevent the paint from getting on the parts that are not to be painted. Sheets of tin, about 8 by 10 inches in dimensions, are inserted between the running-board shields and the body. This idea is applicable whether you use a brush or spray, and will save quite a bit of labor when painting window frames of any kind.

Inefficient Brakes Are Cause of Many Mishaps

Analysis of automobile accident statistics has disclosed that a major percentage is attributed to inefficient brakes, and with the steady increasing volume of traffic that passes through city streets and over country highways every day the necessity of having this unit of the car in perfect condition is imperative.

Perfectly working brakes combine safety with enjoyment of motor travel, for power is practically useless unless the driver can properly control the speed of his car. The danger is acute in mountain driving, especially during the vacation season.

AUTOMOBILE ITEMS

One of the most useful tools when removing a tire from the rim is a broken spring leaf.

The senseless automobile horn is the best possible index to the quality of the mind behind it.

You can tour the world now on the easy-payment plan. Imagine falling down on the installments in Afghanistan.

We fear a policeman with a college education never could put the proper inflection on "Who d'ye think you are, Barney Oldfield? Pull over tuh th' curb."

TRAVELING LIBRARY FOR COUNTRY FOLKS

Here is a traveling library in operation. A branch of the Cincinnati public library which goes out into the rural sections and distributes books of knowledge at the doorsteps of those who cannot come to the library.

REPUBLICAN WOMEN

A pilgrimage will be made by the Ohio Council of Republican Women from Columbus to Marion on November 11, to hold services at the Harding Memorial. Those who desire to attend and who will motor to Marion should leave their names with the county chairman, otherwise no reservations will be made for them at the luncheon at the Hotel Harding.

The start from Columbus will be made at 9 o'clock a. m., on November 11, and the return will be made in time to be at the opening session of the council at Columbus at 3 p. m.

Leave your name with Mrs. E. F. Anderson.

To Preserve Ferns

There are at least two very satisfactory ways to preserve maidenhair ferns. One is to dip the ferns as soon as gathered in perfectly limpid gum water. This should be done carefully. After allowing them to drain for two or three minutes, arrange in a vase to dry. Another very good way is to put the ferns, when first gathered, between two clean sheets of blotting paper. Lay between boards and press for a week or so.
